"PAPA'S TOKENS" by Rich Bottles Jr.

"Unlisted PA Merchant Tokens (part 11)" by Larry Dziubek

(Starting with Volume 23-Issue 1, an attempt is being made by PATCO members to build a list of tokens not known when the PA tome was published. We try to follow the example of Dr. Aqua, but stray from the strict standards. There are some storecards included that are not issued by pure merchants. Food Stamp tokens are not included, but we are compiling a separate list of them and need your help. Some, but not all plastic tokens, are included herein. New Independent Brewing Co. varieties are not entered into this list, but are maintained in our database. Some entries are incomplete, because only partial data was provided in eBay sales or retail listings. You are invited to add or correct any of this information if you have seen the actual token. Write to Larry Dziubek.)

PAPA'S TOKENS

By Rich Bottles Jr.

Keeping up with the latest bar chips or elongated coins in the geographic region that you collect can be a daunting task. Fewly issued amusement tokens, specifically video game tokens, are also difficult to keep track of or to monitor. In the case of video game tokens, a collector may love the tokens but may hate to visit those noisy child-infested arcades. Many of us would rather slit our wrists than enter a Chuck E. Cheese.

But still, even I was surprised to discover that there could be as many as 15 locally-issued amusement tokens from Carnegie that I never knew about until this year (and more are expected to be issued in future years). Chances are, if you collect Pittsburgh-area tokens, you haven't heard about the tokens either.

My brother and my nephew, who enjoy playing the classic pinball games, attended the annual "Pinburgh Match-Play Championship" at the Professional & Amateur Pinball Association (PAPA) World Headquarters facility at 100 Keystone Drive in Scott Township/Carnegie, PA, near the intersection of I-76 and I-279.

In 2004, Steve Epstein, who founded the world-famous Broadway Arcade in New York City, helped turn a large warehouse in Carnegie into a 30,000 foot mega-arcade containing 400 pinball machines, a projection screen and internet kiosks. The building was designed to be the permanent venue for the World Pinball Championships. Consequently, the facility is only open to the public twice a year, specifically for the World Pinball Championships and the Pinburgh Match-Play Championship.

My brother attended the 2012 Pinburgh Match-Play Championship, which was held from March 30 through April 1. Players of all skill levels as well as spectators can attend the Match-Play Championship. To play any of the practice machines, each play requires two tokens to activate the machine. A roll of tokens costs $10.

There is a custom, collectible token issued for Pinburgh attendees only. One custom token is included in each roll of tokens sold at the event. Token purchases go directly to charity. In 2011, $12,550 was raised for the Western Pennsylvania Humane Society.

My brother was kind enough to obtain three different PAPA tokens for me at the Spring Pinburgh event. All of the nickel tokens have a standard PAPA obverse, but each has a unique reverse design. I was impressed by the unusual and intricately-designed devices on the tokens, so I contacted a PAPA representative to ask if there were any more designs.

The administrator of the PAPA Facebook page responded to my inquiry, stating, "There are actually 15 unique PAPA token designs, and the smoking helmet is from the Pinburgh 2012 Match Play Championship. We're probably going to write a blog post in the next few weeks about all of the token designs - there are many people interested in collecting them."

dancing jigs and singing Irish ballads. He also boasted of being a murderer and a forger.

McKenna's act fooled Patrick Dormer and he eventually introduced the stranger to an AOH Chief Officer, who allowed the man to join the organization. Using his new contacts over the next couple of years, McKenna was able to participate in the discussions and plotting of a number crimes, including murder, kidnapping and the destruction of a railroad bridge.

It turned out that McKenna's real name was James McParland and he was a detective with Pinkerton Agency, working specifically for the union-busting interests of railroad and coal baron Franklin B. Gowen. Gowen then served as prosecutor of a number of AOH members, who also happened to be union leaders. McParland testified at the trials. Gowen's successful prosecutions resulted in a debilitating blow to the coal union and helped to prematurely end a strike. Gowen's life later ended prematurely in 1889 at the Wormley Hotel in Washington, DC, with a bullet in his head.

The Historic Atlantic Garden Hotel – Just outside of St. Clair

By Rich Bottles Jr.

In the mid-nineteenth century, the town of St. Clair, Pennsylvania, was a quiet town, known for its respectable businesses and strong Irish heritage. So it was no surprise when Martin Dormer and Thomas Canfield, who were both born in Ireland, decided to build the Atlantic Hotel and Tavern that they chose to construct it just outside the borough line on the road leading to Mill Creek and Port Carbon.

The large brick building, built on the dark side of an otherwise vacant intersection, was completed in 1856. The structure included a hotel, a saloon and a secret cobblestone tunnel leading to a hilltop distillery on the opposite side of the intersection. The business partnership included Dormer operating the brewery and Canfield overseeing the hotel.

Canfield was rarely present at the business, however, because he preferred working his second job, which was as a canal boatman. But when Thomas Canfield was navigating the canals, he left his wife in charge of his interests at the hotel. Catherine Canfield proved herself to be quite a resourceful businesswoman.

The location of the Atlantic Hotel and Tavern, which soon garnered a reputation as one of the rowdiest establishments in Schuylkill County, was conveniently outside of the jurisdiction of the St. Clair magistrate, but not outside the long arm of the county prosecutor. In late 1856, Catherine Canfield was arrested by the Schuylkill County district attorney and promptly convicted of keeping a so-called "disorderly house," which in those days was legalese for whorehouse.

Now, on the other side of the business, Martin Dormer and his brother Patrick were well-respected in the community. Both men were members of the St. Boniface congregation and both had been trusted public servants (Martin was once the St. Clair postmaster and Patrick was county commissioner). To demonstrate his commitment to making the area near his establishment more family-friendly, Martin put forth the effort of laying out "Dormer's Park" near his hillside distillery and offered it as a place where groups could enjoy picnics, concerts and dances.

Unfortunately, one of the so-called groups participating in the local entertainment in the 1870's was called the Molly Maguires. The "Mollies," as they were affectionately known, was a secret society of Irish-American coal miners in the U.S., but the members were especially notorious in the unionized coalfields of Pennsylvania, where they were suspected of committing a number of crimes and disturbances.

In 1873, a young ruffian strolled into the Dormer establishment, which was now being run by Martin's brother Patrick. The man identified himself as James McKenna and he expressed an interest in becoming a member of the Ancient Order of Hibernians (AOH), which he believed was a front for the Molly Maguires. To prove his worthiness, he began drinking excessively, fighting other bar patrons,
